"The strong attachment of subscribers to well-conducted newspapers is fully confirmed by publishers. "Stop my paper," words of

So long as a paper plurious a just, honorable and judicious course, meeting the wants of its customers in all respects, the ties of friendslip between the subscribers and the paper are as hard to break by an outside third party as the link which binds old friends in business or social life. Occasional defects and errors in a newspaper are overlooked by those who have become attached to it through its perusal for years. They sometimes become dissatisfied with it on account of something which has slipped into its columns, and may stop taking it, but the absence of the familiar sheet at their homes and offices for a few weeks becomes an insurportable privation, and they hasten to take it again, and possibly apologize. For laving it stopped. No friendship on earth, is more constant than that contracted by the reader for a journal which makes an honest and carnest effort to merit its continued support. Hence a conscientiously conducted japer becomes a favorite in the family."

THE real friends of workingmen are those who insist upon having honest money in circulation, and not those who clamor for a currency that would foster speculation, increase the power of capital, and tion, increase the power or capital bire. Creat the market nothing to do with the manipulation of the money market, nor do that sale as a good sign that the Repcalls are improving as a party and beditions which will give steady employ-ment to industry and a fixed value to the money which they receive for their labor. In fluctuations of price labor is the last t rise and the first to fall. It is a commodity that cannot be held for a rise, like cot ton, wheat or stock, but must be sold every day. Therefore workingmen, so far as they are real workingmen, cannot be speculators, and are unable to take advantage of conditions favorable to speculators. A currency that has no fixed value stimulates the musical directorship of the Col-speculation, and so cannot be favorable to

"As regards the currency question, it seems to me that its importance is overrated by those who are clamoring for an increase in the circulating medium. These men overlook the fact that the great bulk of exchanges are performed by checks and drafts, and that both the paper and metallic money issued by the government do but a comparatively small amount of service in this way.

"As regards the tariff, while it is no doubt true that class interests are to some extent favored at the expense of the general public, it is, in my opinion; a great deal better to let it stand as it is than to be constantly tinkering at it and keeping the commercial community, in, suspense over

"As regards the evils of intemperance they are no doubt very great, and particularly so among the laboring classes. I believe that legislation may do something in the way of taxing heavily all spirituous liquors, but I think more may be done by substituting a lighter class of stimulants for those heretofore so largely used, and by creating a public sentiment in favor of temperance in its truest sense. The laboring classes of to-day, perhaps, expect too much from legislation, but certain it is that they are determined to have something, and I believe the sentiment of the

All civilized nations have made great strides forward in providing the material comforts of life. Whether the laboring classes have shared in this improvement to an equal or reasonable extent with the classes controlling capital is for your committee to ascertain. My own opinion is that they have not, and that some changes in our present laws will have to be made to meet the great changes which have almost unnoticed and unrecognized, taken place during the last quarter of a seen, triv,"
